ENLIGHTEN EXERCISE #32

Identifying Your Signature Strengths

Low interest/low skills: These are competencies, skills, and abilities that you rate low. They don’t necessarily excite you to utilize them. The goal is to avoid tasks, activities, and responsibilities on the job that require use of these skills.

High interest/low skills: These are competencies, skills, and abilities that you rate low, but you enjoy using. The goal is to explore using these more in hobbies and leisure activities, as they are passions of yours.

Low interest/high skills: These are competencies, skills, and abilities that you rate highly but aren’t very interested in applying. The goal is to minimize tasks, activities, and responsibilities on the job that require use of these skills.

High interest/high skills: These are competencies, skills, and abilities that are your signature strengths. The goal is to develop and cultivate opportunities to express these skills as much as possible.
What are your signature strengths? Write down your skills, abilities, and competencies that correspond to each of the four quadrants below. What patterns do you see?

Low interest/low skills:

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

High interest/low skills:

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

Low interest/high skills:

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

High interest/high skills:

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________